Thriving, biodiverse forests can help boost the productivity of nearby agricultural systems. And if all smallholder farmers in forest frontiers earned a dignified and stable livelihood, this could help relieve much of the current pressure to clear native forests. By considering farmer income objectives and environmental objectives in tandem, we can reach both goals more effectively.

Coordinated Cooperation for Sustainable Production and Forest Conservation in Mato Grosso (Brazil)

Description:

In this event, the Netherlands and UK, the State of Mato Grosso and the private sector will demonstrate their effective business case for international cooperation that has made agricultural production more sustainable and improved conservation of the Amazon rainforest in Mato Grosso (Brazil). The donor countries will share why they decided to invest in Mato Grosso, and the State Government, the PCI Institute and the private sector will share their role in implementing the coordinated efforts as part of this partnership.

The coordinated investments by four national governments (the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, Germany and Norway) and a subnational government (Mato Grosso, Brazil) over five years has successfully reduced deforestation rates. After the State of Mato Grosso launched the Produce, Conserve and Include Strategy at COP21 in Paris in 2015, the four governments supported and invested in the strategy in 2016 and 2017 through the ISLA, NICFI and REM programs.

The partnerships have strengthened the capacity of public bodies including the State Environment Secretary in command-and-control activities and supported enabling conditions to improve the sustainability in the state's main commodity chains and including indigenous people in land-use governance decision-making.

During the period 2015-2020, deforestation rates in Mato Grosso were significantly lower than the average trend from other Legal Amazon States. While the Legal Amazon States registered an increase in the annual deforestation rates of 75% from 2015 to 2020, Mato Grosso maintained it at 11%.

In 2020, a Strategic Committee to Combat Illegal Deforestation, Illegal Forest Exploration and Forest Fires - CEDIF-MT, presided by the Governor of the State defined a plan of action. As a result, in 2020, 6.891 deforestation alerts were detected covering 680 thousand hectares.

Integrated operations between SEMA and other state agencies were coordinated to stop deforestation in the field. The alerts led to a record R$ 3,8 billion in fines issued by the State Secretary of Environment - SEMA and other government agencies. As a result, DETER alerts for deforestation have systematically been in lower levels comparing to previous years, with a reduction of 21.7% in the alerts from August 2020 until July 2021.

National Initiatives for Sustainable and Climate Smart Oil Palm Smallholders

Millions of smallholders and workers earn their livelihoods in the palm oil sector, a sector that significantly contributes to food security, employment, gross domestic product (GDP) and the balance of trade of many producing countries. The global expansion of this sector is associated with significant sustainability challenges.

The Sustainable Trade Initiative (IDH) and Solidaridad believe there is a solution. Together, they have designed a new way to enable palm oil producing countries to notably contribute to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the Paris Agreement. With support from the Government of the Netherlands, four National Initiatives for Sustainable Climate Smart Oil Palm Smallholders (NI-SCOPS) have been set up in cooperation with the governments of Indonesia, Malaysia, Nigeria and Ghana.

The national initiatives are collaborations between consuming and producing countries to support smallholders to transition to more sustainable forms of production and improve their livelihoods, thereby contributing to climate change mitigation and adaptation. In this event, the participating governments will share examples of the work that has been carried out since the inception of the National Initiatives in 2019 and the panel will explore the benefits of supporting smallholders to transition to sustainable production models, how the international community can work together to address the most pressing challenges, and possible ways to lift barriers to scale up.

Cocoa & Forests Initiative

November 3rd 12:00-13:00

Ghana Pavilion, Blue Zone, Scottish Event Campus \(SEC\), UNFCCC COP 26, Glasgow, SCOTLAND

This event hosted by the government of Ghana will include a contribution by the Minister of Land & Natural Resources, IDH – the Sustainable Trade Initiative, the World Cocoa Foundation and industry partners. For IDH, it is important to reaffirm the Cocoa & Forests Initiative as the arena for government and private sector partners to address the issue of deforestation within the cocoa sector. After four years of implementation, this event will demonstrate the alignment of the signatories as stipulated in the Joint Framework for Action, look beyond commitment and towards action for the 2nd phase of implementation, and consider the challenges and opportunities of the close collaboration ahead for its implementation under the facilitation of IDH and the World Cocoa Foundation.

Given the Initiative is also generating interest in other African countries as well as in Latin America, this event will share the model and achievements of the Cocoa & Forests Initiative with governments and companies interested in enhancing cocoa sustainability and protecting forests.
